NEW BUSINESS EXIT STRATEGIES

Preparing to Sell Your Business

Most business owners are too busy building and maintaining businesses to devote much time or energy to planning for their disposition. The difficulty with this approach is that the decision to sell the business is often made under circumstances, such as physical or fiscal illness, "battle fatigue," or other circumstances which require a prompt disposition. As a rule of thumb, the more promptly the business has to be sold, the less likely it is that the owner will receive a price commensurate with the asset he is selling, and for many of us our business represents the sum of a life's effort.

"Knowing how to end your business can be as important as knowing how to start it. Planning your exit strategy in advance gives you the time to do it right and maximize your returns!"

Business Accounting Expert

Having financial statements properly prepared can assist in valuation, speeds the sale process, and minimizes taxes due.

The Exit Strategies Team Legal

Evaluating your business structure, and overseeing current trends, can lower liability risk and prevent pitfalls at time of sales.

Financial Planner

Provides choices of monthly retirement income when desired. Prevents loss of capital, and peace of mind is a benefit.

Business Evaluation Expert

Your benefit is valuations using several different methods, with the buyer prepared to accept your price range.

Business Brokers & Lenders

Provide possible financing and buyers, as appropriate.

Real Estate Broker

Will assist in obtaining highest possible price, ease of sale, and proper marketing of the real estate.
